IT IS finished, and we are very glad. The storks have brought one more EPITOME and have flown away. And now we place our book before the tribunal of public opinion, fully conscious that it is far from perfect, yet feeling that we have done our best, such as it is; and on this we base our plea for charity and appreciation.

Realizing fully the necessarily largely categorical and statistical nature of the EPITOME, it has been our utmost endeavor to make this side of the work complete and exact without being fulsome. At the same time we hope and feel that we have made in this EPITOME a distinct advance in the artistic and literary features as well as in the general make-up and arrangement.

In conclusion, it is our pleasure, as well as our privilege, to say a most hearty thank you, to all those, and their name is legion, who have cheered and helped us in our undertaking.

THE EDITORS.

Sound a reveille, long and loud!
 Let the fife and throbbing drum
 Tell the world our sturdy heroes,
 Men of nineteen-four, have come.
 Strike the notes of "Alma Mater,"
 Make the music that of old
 Timed the tread of victor thousands,
 Where the battle surges rolled!
 Fling our brown and white to heaven,
 Wave it high o'er field and flood;
 Torn by many a hard encounter
 Stained with many a hero's blood.

COLLEGE LIFE has well been compared to warfare, for its demands compel one to struggle continually for the mastery. Eternal diligence is the price of an education, and only the survivors in this survival of the fittest reap the harvest. 'Tis a pleasant retrospection for us to look back over the rocky road-bed we have travelled for nearly four years, and we offer up a silent prayer of thankfulness that we have met with such good fortune. Never can we forget the pitiful spectacle after the battle of Calculus; many were the dead and wounded. The hospital was full, and the Red-Cross nurses were busy 'way into the summer caring for the wounded, and one by one they wandered back again, to take their stand under the old banner.

Man is ever the same; the crumbling toombstone, the sculptured marble and the venerable cathedral, all bear witness to the instructive desire within us to be remembered by coming generations. With pride we gaze on the tablet of brass in the Mechanical Engineering laboratory; this marks a Bull Run in our campaign, and the last words of our General, like those of Stonewall Jackson, are still ringing in our ears—"Let us go over the river and lie down under the trees. But how short-lived is the immortality which the works of our hands can confer. The noblest monuments of art that the world has ever known are covered with the soil of twenty centuries. The works of the age of Pericles lie at the foot of the Acropolis in indiscriminate ruin. The plow-share turns up the marble which the hand of Phidias, in ages past, chiseled into beauty, and the Mussulman folds his flock beneath the falling columns of Minerva's temple.

Neither sculptured marble, nor stately column can reveal to other ages the lineaments of the spirit. It is by thought that has aroused our intellect from its slumbers, that has given lustre to virtue and dignity to truth; by those examples that have inflamed our souls with the love of knowledge, and not by means of sculptured marble, that we shall hold communion with the world.

Tell life's proudest tale; what is it? A few attempts, successless; a few crushed or moldered hopes; much paltry fretting; a little sleep; the story is concluded; the curtain falls; the farce is over.

Seeing that these things are, what shall we say? Shall we exclaim with the gay hearted Grecian, "Drink to-day, for to-morrow we are not?" Shall we quietly float down the current, smiling if we can, silent when we must, lulling cares to sleep by the music of gentle enjoyment, and passing dreamlike through a land of dreams? No! classmates, no! Dreamlike as is all life, there is one reality—our duty. Let us cling to that, and distress may overwhelm, but can not disquiet us—may destroy, but can not hurt us. The bitterness of earthly things and the shortness of earthly life will cease to be evils and begin to be blessings.

JUNIOR HISTORY

IT IS said that in moments of great peril all of our former life passes before us in a few seconds, and we see everything that has happened to us as clearly as at the time at which it took place. Not long ago, during the mid-year exams, the author went into an examination, and on looking at the paper was seized with a sudden attack of dizziness, and it was then that he had an experience such as that described. And so, with the memory of the events which it is his duty to describe fixed anew in his mind, he now takes his pen to relate to the reader those happenings in the history of the class of nineteen hundred and five which distinguish it from both previous and coming classes.

When we gathered in the chapel on opening day nearly three years ago, we prided ourselves on the fact that we were the largest class that had ever entered Lehigh. Despite this fact, when Founder's Day came the Sophmores managed to carry off the honors, but we were by no means disgraced, as we won one out of three events. The glory of the Sophomores in their victory was considerably lessened by the fact that practically no posters were seen at Daylight of Founder's Day, as our vigilance was so great that they were pulled down before the paste had time to dry. The rest of the Freshman year passed quietly. In all branches of athletics nineteen hundred and five men showed themselves worthy of places on the teams, although some of them have not shown as great ability to grapple with the subtler problems of mathematics or to investigate the mysteries of physics as taught at Lehigh.

When in September of 1902 we gathered again as full-fledged Sophomores in front of the Chapel, we found many empty places. There was still a large number in the class, but many absences were noted. We managed, however, to do up the Freshmen, as we defeated them in the rush and on Founder's Day, and the banquet—well, that one incident, at least, is indelibly imprinted on the mind of every nineteen hundred and five man. During this year, Calculus, the greatest enemy of the Lehigh man, was met and while conquered, he thinned our ranks still more.

Still, when we met again last September, there were many familiar faces waiting to greet us. By this time we had developed into upperclassmen, and anxious to prove our mettle, we managed to coach the Freshmen to such a degree that they were very successful in their contests with the Sophomores. We had now begun to realize what college life is, and that two years of it had already passed seemed hard to believe. The best part of our course is still before us, however, and so, classmates, let us enjoy it while we can. In a little more than a year most of us will be already started on our life's work, and the doors of our Alma Mater will be closed on us. The greater part of our life at Lehigh is over, and so, in the language of the poet, let us "seize the fleeting moment," or before we know it, it will be gone.

Some events in our course stand out before all others with striking prominence. The results of our contests with our rival down the river are things which will never be forgotten by true Lehigh men. And while it is not the duty of the historian to dwell on these matters, he cannot with justice to the class omit them, for many of the most important factors in winning these never-to-be-forgotten contests have been men from our class, of whom we may well be proud. Nor are they unworthy of more than a passing notice, for they deserve and have the heartfelt thanks of every one of their classmates and fellow-students. May they help in bringing back more victories which are so dear to the hearts of Lehigh men.

The time which remains to us is doubly valuable in that we have now learned how to enjoy college life, and now realizing the mistakes which we have made in the past, can correct them. Let it therefore be our aim to enjoy ourselves as is befitting Lehigh men, to work in the same spirit, but, above all, to try to bring credit to our Alma Mater in the work which lies before us. In this lies the essence of true Lehigh spirit, and let us show to the classes before us and those which will soon take our places, that we do possess this spirit, and that it is from us that they may take their example.

IT WAS a bright day for old Lehigh when the men of 1906 entered. They were a husky lot with a promising future before them. Broken in with a firm hand, they received a good training for their next year's duties. One little incident served to greatly influence their Sophomore career. Of course, 1906 held the customary Freshman banquet, and celebrated its conclusion by a scrap with the Sophs. The Faculty got wind of the affair,—no one knows how, for it was a very quiet little shindy,—and promptly suspended two men. As it was absolutely necessary to have them back, various plans were tried, all in vain, however, until the Freshmen came to the rescue. They agreed to give up posters, rushes, and some other privileges if the men were reinstated. This was done, and 1906 was deprived of practically all the customary rights.

On their return to college this fall the Sophomores were handicapped by the loss of their most important officers. A class meeting soon remedied that, and then they got busy.

When the Freshmen reached Bethlehem this fall, some one, for want of better employment, told them the Sophomores had signed away all their privileges and would be unable to do anything to them—and the poor Freshmen actually believed it. They soon began to feel how very important they were, and might soon have become unbearable if the Sophomores had not rounded up a few of the worst and convinced them that they had better quite down.

On opening day each Freshman received a set of rules to govern his actions as a Lehigh man in general, and as a Freshman in particular. This plan was adopted by the Sophomores in place of the posters, which were, of course, forbidden, and has proved far superior to the old system. On the same day we had the regular class rush. Of course it had been given up, but the Faculty realized that high spirits must have some outlet, and gave their consent. Here is the only place that the Sophomores did not show up well. Only about fifty per cent. of them had enough class spirit to turn out. As a result they lost, and the Freshmen even tried to parade, but of course that was soon stopped.

To keep up their spirits, the Sophomores attended several miniature minstrel shows given by the Freshmen. They were very amusing and many of the stunts were quite ingenious. Most of these shows were given at night, as, of course, was proper; but there were several choice exhibitions on the campus. Needless to say the Sophs. were the only ones who got much pleasure out of it. The performers didn't seem to like their parts at all.

These and other innocent amusements served to while away the time till Founder's Day should give the Sophomores a good chance to test the mettle of their rivals. It was well they had something to keep mind and body busy, or the Sophomores would one and all have fallen into the depths of the deepest, blackest, and most hopeless form of some divine despair, for they were solemnly assured by everyone that their teams were worthless. The upper classes turned Job's comforters and assured them that they would be lucky to win in even one event; but the Sophomores let most of this well-meant talk go in one ear and out the other—it wasn't worth stopping. Founder's Day came, and with it bad weather, so the games were postponed. All the teams had more time to round into form, and to show what was really in them.

At last the day came. The Freshmen were full of confidence and overflowing with the glory they were going to win. Perhaps they had never heard the proverb about a proud heart and a haughty spirit. The Sophomores relied entirely upon the known ability of their teams—and events showed this confidence was not misplaced.

The Relay was a good starter. Every Sophomore pulled away from his man, and the final result was never in doubt. In baseball, good team work and timely hitting easily won the day. The football game showed the true spirit of the Sophomores. Their team knew they were up against a faster team, and played all the harder for it. The other team didn't show up to the reputation its supporters gave it, and won only by the narrowest margin. The Sophomores, however, won the series and established their supremacy; and they certainly owed their teams a debt of thanks for their noble work.

Thus the fall campaign ended in glory and renown for 1906, and defeat for its rivals. As was shown by the work of its teams, the class of 1906 aims to live up to the highest standard, and will do its best to succeed in every honorable struggle in which it may engage.

FRESHMAN HISTORY.

GENTLEMEN:—Your humble servant is up against it. Historians before him have written of pictures of banquets,—of vanquished “Sophs.” They have handed down to us choice pieces of knocking, and have told us how worthless and insignificant those same “Sophs” were.

Men of 1907, is your servant to follow in their footsteps? Nay, it is not your wish. Knocking is an art of degenerates. We will therefore leave that means of expression to those of inferior minds.

What then shall your servant write of? Broken up class banquets, pictures never taken? No, such was not our fate. Let me then, fellow classmates, recall to you those pleasant events which have brought such happiness to us, and which Father Time can never erase from our memory.

We met for the first time in the ivy-covered chapel by the way; met to form friendships never to be severed. We next had the pleasure of visiting the “Gym.,” where, bathed in the sunlight of a glorious Autumn day, our noble class was organized. Then to the Athletic Field. Our friends the enemy were there ready to rub it in,—ready to drag our banner in the dust. You remember what happened. How we did shove them all over that field! They were a plucky set of fellows, but we—we were better. To the victors belong the spoils, and so there fell to us that day our first victory.

Our second victory came on Founder’s Day, when we won the football game. It is true we lost the other two events, but they were virtually victories for us. Our boys did certainly run and play ball. Never before in the history of Lehigh has an entering class turned out such athletes in so short a time as did ours. Did we back our teams? Well, I should say so. Modesty forbids me to relate how well we rooted.

After Founder's Day things were slow at times, and just to add a little vim to our college life we rushed the "Sophs." Whenever we felt the need of exercise after a hard day's work we rushed them. There was so much pleasure in seeing just how far we could push '06 down the street.

You recall the night that we exchanged our "rolls for buns." It was the night of the great victory. We did certainly burn things up. That bon-fire,—tut, tut, let's not speak of it. What "old spirits" the thoughts of that grand illumination arouse in us. That's when everybody said, "light up when necessary."

My pen refuses to write more of that eventful night for it trembles and seems to be overcome with that strange "dizziness" which even Lehigh men feel—at times. Before it fails entirely, let me hasten to an end. We came here to be true Lehigh men. We came to make friends and to keep them. To win the respect and admiration of all is our ambition, and if we succeed as well in the future as we have in the past our goal will be won.

Let us then honor our class, and ever keep her to the front. Make her the best one that ever entered Lehigh. Keep her nearest to your hearts, men, and ever cherish the memories of her first year.

Then in closing let us drink to her health, and wish her a long and prosperous life.

- ART. 11—SOFT STUFF.
A good starter; for the sake of appearances.
- ART. 12—HAM SANDWICH.
A Swift article sometimes of Armored construction, made in the Windy City. The safe load is given by the formula. (See Mechanics of Material, Art. 145, Circular Plates).
$$T = \frac{4}{3} \frac{R^2}{D^2} P$$ in which T is the tonnage consumable, r the radius of the consumer, d the depth of same, and P the accompanying Pilsener, all in cu. yds.
- ART. 13—DOG SANDWICH.
Tabloid "Trouble." The more you eat the fewer canines will announce your homecoming from sociological shop visits to the Staatd. Do your duty like a Christian gentleman.
- ART. 14—CELERY.
A vegetable compound discovered by Paine, 1877. Good for the nerves. Students are advised to partake sparingly. Instructors may use freely.

ART. 15—PICKLES.

A pickle is a tough proposition. There are 57 varieties. Several of the ways of getting out of a pickle may be mentioned; namely, five dollar re's; more five dollar re's, still more, keep on, keep up the bluff—take riding lessons, &c.

ART. 16—SALT WAFERS.

Thirst producers. Guaranteed to furnish an eno-o-o-o-rmously large and *treme-e-e-e*ndously great capacity.

ART. 17—POTATO SALAD (LATIN—GRUMBEERA SALAAD).

Ach wass! The inspiration of Dutch poets. After a prolonged fest, the eminent spieler, Yacob Brill tore this off:

KITZEL MICH NET!

Kitzel mich net! Won ich's usht agreed ware
Don mecht mich kitzla dos ich tzomma schnarr!
Nae now! du waisht os ich's net shtanda con;
Bin gor net draw gawaint we du bist, John,
Der Pap? Och was! Are ist shunt long im bed.

Kitzel mich net!

Sell doost now! Hare duch uff un luss mich gæ!
Hob mich gons gronk galocht—my side dot wæ.
Du mawkst mich bussa, mawksht aw don un won
Mich bissel dricka—ust æwennich, John,
Duch wos du doosht; do's we's gadoo si set—
Kitzel mich net!

ART. 18—PRETZELS.

A hard, crystal-covered sinuous substance found free in Allentown. Discovered by Don in the latter part of the XIX century on a bar west of the Lehigh River.

ART. 19—CREAM CHEESE.

Take one part ice cream to three parts grated cheese. Add one part glycerine (nitro), and one part powder (blasting). Stir to a paste and ram well. Shake good-bye before using.

ART. 20—BOCK.

A good finisher. A great factor in music. Responsible for "We Won't Go Home 'Til Morning," "Down Where the Wurtzberger Flows," and "I Was Seeing Nellie Ho—oh—ohme." After two years' practice Bock can be successfully hit for a solid week. The doing of this is called a Festival.

AIR—"MARYLAND, MY MARYLAND."

TUNE—"DOWN WHERE THE WUERZ-BURGER FLOWS."

Calculus! oh, Calculus!

That for months we've labored o'er,

Now at last your time's at hand,

And you're lost for evermore.

When at first you met our eye,

Then we thought we'd surely die,

And for mercy we did cry,

But we'll do so nevermore.

For to-night your reign is done,

And we've seized the tyrant dire.

Calculus, your race is run;

For at hand you see the fire.

Ere the dawn breaks in the sky,

Here your ashes foul shall lie;

For your crimes you're doomed to die

High upon the blazing pyre.

Comrades, shout! Our freedom's nigh,

And our hearts are light again;

For upon the pyre high

See our tyrant writhe in pain.

As we greet to-morrow's sun,

We will cry, "His end has come,

And our liberty's begun;

Surely we've not fought in vain!"

—P. L. A., '01.

Oh come all ye Soph'mores and gather around,

To gloat o'er the fate of your foe:

Old Calculus conquered, and beaten, and bound

Straight off to the regions below.

Don't list to his pleadings, but soak him once more—

Get back for your D's and your E's!

And hanging's too good for the villainous fiend,Your . . . vengeance . . . 'twould . . . never
. . . appease.

CHORUS.

So it's down, down, down where the blueblazes glow, glow, glow;Let him burn, burn, burn—may his tortures be long and slow!He's thumped us, and soaked us, and knocked us about,He's killed a few dozen, and flunked us half out,

But 'tis all over now,

And the end of the row

Finds him down where the blue-blazes glow!No, you don't need to tell us you aren't to blame,That it's Lambert who's really the worst:
Old Lambert is bad, but by tokens the same,

You're the spirit by whom he's accursed.

And though by next year resurrected
you are,

Hell-raising, as ever, once more,

For the present it's up to you, monster, to burn;We will . . . fry . . . out . . . each . . . drop . . . of
. . . your . . . gore.

—W. S. A., '96.

TUNE—"THEN I WOULD BE SATISFIED WITH LIFE."

If I only had a head like that of Lambert's	If I only had a keg of beer from Widman's
Why working Calculus would be a cinch.	For every problem I have flunked so far
Pop Meaker then would be but a back	I'd have a cinch and live upon my income:
number.	I'd go to Allenstadt and start a bar:
I'd even beat out Thornburg at a pinch.	I'd blow the Class to liquor for a life time:
If I only had my way around this college	I'd get each one of them so "plutherized"
Why "Jesse" James I think I'd have to	That they would all of them forget their

1903 Class Poem

Gentlemen, please, your attention!
 We finish a subject today,—
 The Book of our College Endeavors,
 Made up of our work and our play.

First have we learned Self-Reliance,
 The cause and result of success,
 A trait that is more to his life-work
 Than any a man can possess.

It teaches the Lesson of Lehigh,
 If rightly its pages be read;
 It prepares for the next of our subjects,—
 The Book of the Earning of Bread.

Next, we have broadened our visions
 By contact with those of our kind,
 And learned to think highly of virtues
 To which, when we came, we were blind.

The time has been short since we started,
 Mere children of mind were we then;
 Four years have we studied our lesson,
 And now we are,—yes, we are men.

For all, to our full satisfaction,
 Have seen in the trials gone through us
 That those whom we once thought beneath
 Can do what we cannot do.

We are men with the truest of manhood,
 Proud of the title we've earned;
 We have studied the Lesson of Lehigh,
 And these are the things we have learned.

Lastly and surely the finest
 Of gifts that old Lehigh extends
 Is that which we value the highest
 The Art of the Making of Friends.

Things that are better and higher
 Than mere education can reach
 For there's more in the Lesson of Lehigh
 Than reading and lectures can teach.

Of friends who will laugh when we're merry
 Or sympathize when we are sad;
 Such friends we are leaving behind us,—
 The best that we ever have had!

Gentlemen, thanks, I am finished.
 Your learning should carry you far,
 But know you the Lesson of Lehigh
 Has made you the men that you are.

Kick-Off in Lafayette Game, Lehigh Field, November 21, 1903

THE close of the football season of 1903 saw Lehigh again with a record to be proud of; two hundred and ninety points scored to our opponents' forty-five; and another victory over Lafayette. This is the story in brief, but it does not tell all. The game with U. of P. was a surprise. In it Pennsylvania found herself, and for the first time; the shock stunned Lehigh. Swarthmore we defeated badly. Then came Princeton. That we can rightfully claim to have scored on her, football authorities throughout the country have acknowledged, and Referee Young cut rather a poor figure in weakly allowing himself to be hacked into changing his already spoken decision.

Princeton was played to a standstill, the ball being in her territory three-fourths of the time, and only a desperate defence saved her the game at all.

These two were our only defeats, Dickinson, Lafayette and Georgetown going down before us. Cornell tied us in a game in which she was constantly on the defensive, but for some unaccountable reason Lehigh seemed never able to score, though many times within easy striking distance.

The work of the team, both individually and collectively, and the generalship of Captain Farabaugh was of the highest class, and too much credit cannot be given to Coach Newton, who was not only the "man behind the gun," but the powder in it as well.

WHEN the season of 1903 began the prospects of a successful baseball team were very dull and it was only through the persistent and untiring efforts of all concerned that we were able to accomplish the difficult task of defeating Lafayette two out of three games, a thing which has not happened since the spring of 1900.

On the southern trip we won two out of the three games played, the weather interfering with the remainder of the schedule. The games with Pennsylvania were as close as usual and as for the Princeton game the familiar expression of "up in the air" will tell its story.

The best game of the season was, without a doubt, the second game with Lafayette, which was brought to a close by a triple play in the tenth inning with the score 2 to 0 in our favor after nine innings of good fast playing with neither side scoring.

With material containing but three men of the previous team and having the misfortune of losing several good men at the beginning of the season, there is no doubt that we wound up the schedule with a much better record than could have been expected.

Lehigh University Baseball Team

—LACROSSE—

THE lacrosse season of 1903 started with every prospect of a winning team. All of the 1902 players were in college and Mr. Carmichael, a fast and experienced Canadian player had been secured as coach.

The first game with Pennsylvania came as a rude shock; and although we won, we saw that we had much to learn. The following Saturday found us at our worst; and on a strange field, in a drizzling rain we lost to Johns Hopkins by a one-sided score. The next week we journeyed to Hoboken and defeated Stevens handily, due mainly to the splendid work of Captain Lattig. The team was now improving fast and the Swarthmore game, although we lost, was the best played of the year. The game for the following Saturday, our final one, was cancelled by Cornell.

The season, though fairly successful, was not long enough to develop the team to championship form. The interest taken in the game, shown by the large number of men trying for the team, and the general work of the men, shows a great advance over that of the several preceding seasons, and if this improvement can be kept up, the season of 1904 should land us nearer the championship banner than we have been since '98.

Lehigh University Lacrosse Team

FOR the past three years there has been a gradual improvement in track athletics at Lehigh, a fact made evident by the success of the 1903 team, the result of the season's work being two victories and one defeat, which is the reverse of that of the previous season.

At Rutgers we were defeated by a fairly large score and in our meet with Haverford, won by a close score. The most satisfactory work, however, was with Lafayette, whom we defeated by a score of 71 points to 37, which was even better than our large score of 68 to 40 the previous year.

The records are now beginning to change to a higher standard and this season the pole vault, 220 and 440-yard dashes and the 220-yard hurdle, changed to a better class.

As all of the point-winners of the 1903 team return to college this year, the prospects of another successful season are exceptionally good.

Great credit is due to the candidates for their faithful work and to Dr. Davis for his efficient coaching and training of the team.

Lehigh University Track Team

IN many ways this year's basketball season was a great success, in others a disappointment. There is no doubt that the team is the fastest which has ever represented the University, the material being plentiful and good. The men did not report for practice as regularly as they should have done at the first of the season, and this, combined with the limited time allowed for basketball in the gymnasium, prevented the early development of the team. Furthermore, as last year, the team was without a coach or adviser. Despite these drawbacks, the team showed that it was one of the fastest in the college ranks.

The first game at Swarthmore put confidence in the men, for they played finely together, but three days afterwards Princeton and Pennsylvania cancelled their games with us, which did much to break up the season. When Yale played here, the team was sadly off color and lost to an aggregation by no means so fast as they. The Cornell game showed what Lehigh could do.

In regard to the schedule it must be said that the manager did his part, but only one game a week was allowed by the Athletic Committee. Had about twelve games been scattered well through the months of January and February, the interest taken in the game by the team and students would have been much increased.

THE season's work was begun, as has been usual for some time past, by but few old men. There were, however, many candidates and from among these were picked the most promising men, and under the direction of the physical director they were put through the preliminary training. Able coaching and faithful practice gradually developed the new men, and improved the work of the old.

In the exhibition with Princeton, the team's showing was very creditable, and after this the men worked with renewed interest.

The score in the Haverford contest was very close, and it may be said in justice to the team that, but for the handicap of a long illness under which the captain labored, Lehigh would have won.

The last meet was held with Rutgers, and though the score is an evidence that the team fought hard, they lost to a better team.

The performance in the home "L" contest showed a marked improvement over that of the exhibition in the fore part of the season, and since the men are nearly all underclassmen, there is reason to expect more encouraging results next year.

LITERARY

VIOLETS

Each Violet bears a thought of Thee,
Within its fragrant face,
But, ah, the messenger is shy
And hides each tell-tale trace.

But if Thou'lt closer bend and touch
Its lips with thine, I wot,
Thou'lt find my message hidden there,
No word of it forgot.

And if I sent e'en numberless
Shy messengers to Thee,
Each tiny face would hold in trust
A new, sweet thought of Thee.

The Lehigh Spirit

IT WAS a nasty fall evening. All day the rain had been falling in a slow, persistent drizzle, and when darkness came on, the electric lights about the station showed nothing but a wet, deserted platform, and two busses drawn by weary, dejected looking horses. Inside the building the bus drivers were seated together before the stove, drying themselves while waiting for the evening train; and through the grating of the office window could be seen the ticket agent in his cosy little box, with corn-cob pipe between his teeth, and feet resting upon the top of the table in front of him. The rain blowing in sudden gusts against the pane caused him to look up a moment from the paper he was reading; then he coolly refilled his pipe, rose and lighted it from the smoky lamp, and settling his feet once more upon the table, tilted back in his chair and returned to the attractive columns of the Globe. A whistle was heard down the track and a glance out of the window showed to the comfortably fixed agent a headlight which rapidly increased in size as the Valley Train came up through the yards. A minute later the heavy engine with its long train of coaches rolled clanking past the platform and, with much noise and waste of steam, came to a full stop.

Only three passengers stepped from the train. Two of them immediately hurried to the buses, gave their checks to the drivers, who by this time had emerged from the interior of the station, and having relieved themselves of the unpleasantness of looking after baggage in the rain, entered the low roofed, ramshackly vehicles which were to carry them to their destinations. The other gave the grip he was carrying to one of the drivers with the laconic direction, "The Eagle," and turning, walked slowly away towards the bridge. A ray of light from a window struck him full in the face as he turned, and called forth an exclamation from the driver who had just thrown the valise upon the footboard of the bus. "Looks like a ghost," muttered that individual as the traveler passed on into the darkness.

The stranger entered the old covered bridge, and walked about half way across. Then glancing to the east, his eye caught the glow from the steel mills, and he came to a stop. The busses rattled past him, but he did not move; they rumbled on, struck the descent on the other side, and then passed up over the canal and out of hearing. It was early, but when the sounds of the wheels were no longer to be heard, the bridge was deserted. It was one of those nights when nothing but business of the most importance will draw the inhabitants of the Bethlehems from their homes. The rain, cold almost as sleet, had been beating down since early morning, and the wind from off South Mountain had finished despoiling the trees of their last brown leaves. The river, swollen by the downfall to the proportions of an immature flood, glided swiftly and smoothly beneath the old bridge towards the "rocky rapids" of immortal song.

For a long time the man on the bridge stood motionless, watching the constant glow from the furnaces. Now and then, from one of the tall, indistinctly outlined stacks would burst a column of fire, lighting up the mills for an instant, only to die down again. But the red glow was always there, had been there every night for years. From his room on the heights in Bethlehem he used to look towards the river, and go to sleep with the vivid picture before his mind. The rain beat into his face, and the wind made him shiver, but he only pulled his hat down over his eyes and buttoned the storm coat close up to his chin. It was good to be out in the storm; the turmoil of the elements seemed in accord with the struggle taking place within him.

As he stood there a rush of memories came back to him. It had been four years and more since that June when he had graduated from college. How different his going out and his return! Then everything had been bright and promising; friends were congratulating him; cheers could be heard from across the campus; the trees on the long slope had been in their glory, and the terraces were fresh and green. Everyone had seemed sorry to see him go; even old "Pop," under whom he had flunked nearly every Math course in the calendar, had shaken hands with him and wished him good luck. As he walked down the hill and past the chapel, a great feeling of regret had swept over him; but he had gone on laughing, his hopes high and his faith in the future great. And in the evening, when he and she had taken that last walk together through the trees and across the campus where he had spent four happy years; when in the shadow of the chestnuts, looking out upon the moon lighted lawn, he had stumbingly told her all he had been thinking and feeling for so long; and when she had come close to him and nestled in his arms—why then his cup of happiness had been full. The whole world was before him, and he had only to go forth and conquer. When he had left her, her words were still with him, and he had kept them always. He had intended to go home that night, but on the way had been caught by a group of his classmates, and dragged, all unwilling, to Carl's; and there, amid the cheery crowd of Lehigh men, seated at tables with steins and glasses before him, as round followed round and song followed song, at last he joined thoroughly in the happiness and jollity about him, and responded to a toast. His speech had hardly been coherent, he remembered—certainly not brilliant, but every word was cheered to the echo, and when he came to the slogan, the cry which had always wound up a good Lehigh speech—and may it always be kept a tradition at Lehigh—pandemonium broke loose. That was all he remembered; the next morning he left on the early train.

All this had happened four years ago. And how different were things now. He had left Lehigh with bright hopes, and with the glamor of romance around him. Four years in the mountains and forests of Venezuela had rather dashed the hopes; and the last few days had utterly dispelled the romance. He had had the fever, and when after a long fight he had recovered sufficiently to return home, and had been sent to the nearest seaport, he was surprised not to find letters awaiting him from her. The missives had not come so frequently during the last year, he remembered, and when they had reached him they were different from those of the first year of his absence. Still, in the solitude of a savage country they had been like bright lights from the world he had known, lights which beckoned him on and urged him to better work. Her silence had worried him, and the voyage home was all too slow. She had moved to New York during his absence, and there he met her. That was all there was to it, and it had taken him two days to realize the truth.

The glow in the east sank to a duller red. "I don't know why I came here," he said to himself. "Lehigh holds nothing for me now. All the fellows I used to know are gone, and all the memories of the old place,"—he paused. "Well, I'll take a look around tomorrow and then pull out," he said half aloud, and pulling himself together as though with an effort, he turned toward the other side of the river. The wind tore savagely at the long coat which hung closely about his gaunt body, and once or twice he had to pause to regain his breath. As he crossed the bridge which spanned the Monocacy, the lights shining from Carl's windows appealed to him. He was weaker than he had thought, and the prospect of a long uphill walk dismayed him somewhat. A rest and something to drink would refresh him, he thought. Then, too, there would be no one there on such a night, and he ran no danger of meeting an acquaintance. He did not care for company.

He pushed open the swinging door, and stepping inside, shook himself clear of the rain. The old place had not changed. The tables were ranged against the wall as he had remembered them, and behind the bar the neatly arranged glassware and liquors presented a glittering array. Only the bartender was different. He asked for a glass of beer, and watched the man of the white apron while he drew it and scraped off the top of the glass; then took it over to the table and sat listlessly back in one of the chairs. The warmth of the room was comfortable in contrast with the cold outside. He stretched his legs luxuriously; and it seemed as if a new spirit of rest was beginning to take possession of him amid these familiar surroundings. He was glad he had come in now, and even wished he had someone to whom he could talk, someone whom he had known in the old days.

The door swung open, and a tall slender young fellow entered the room. A smiling face, and a pair of good natured looking eyes beaming from behind gold-rimmed glasses, gave to him an air of good fellowship; and when he removed the glasses and carefully wiped the moisture from them with his handkerchief, the man at the table started with recognition. It was Gilbertson, who had played end on the championship team in his own senior year. The new comer called for a drink, pulled a cigarette from its case, took a few whiffs from it, and threw it away.

"There's going to be a big time at the mass meeting, I hear," said the man behind the bar.

"Yes," answered the other, in his frank easy tone. "We expect the whole college to turn out tonight, and a number of the old men are going to be there. Thanksgiving's only two days off, and we've just got to win that game."

He tossed off the drink and started to go, giving a careless glance at the stranger in the corner. When he reached the door he stopped and looked back; then he made as if to go out, hesitated, turned, and walked over to the table.

"Excuse me," he said; "but haven't I met you somewhere? It seems to me —," and a light dawned in his eyes as he scanned more closely the fever-thinned face of the man before him. "By all that's holy, Frank Ashley, where have you come from?" The two men were shaking hands and laughing like boys.

They sat down together at the table; and then commenced a good, long, satisfying talk. Old experiences were reviewed, hazing and rushing lived over again, and all the little things recalled, those little things which go to make up college life, and which are forgotten until some such talk as this brings them to mind. And as the talk went on, the attentions of the bartender became more and more frequent; and as the glasses were emptied and as the heaps of pretzels disappeared (Ashley had never eaten such pretzels as those) the heavy look faded from the face of the wanderer, and his eyes gleamed with an animation that had long been absent. Forgotten were the forests of Venezuela, forgotten the climate and the fever; he was living again in the time of four years ago, and even his great trouble was for the moment forgotten. What had Gilbertson been doing? Oh, he had a good position up state, but had obtained a leave of absence for three months, and had been coaching the football team that fall. Suddenly he looked at his watch. "Great Scott, Frank, there's a mass-meeting of the whole college tonight, as a prelude to the Lafayette game day after tomorrow, and here we're been talking until its almost over. I'm supposed to make a speech, and if I'm not there there'll be the devil to pay. Come, man, shake yourself. We may make it yet." And Ashley, who a few hours before would have avoided such a gathering, jumped to his feet with alacrity.

They hurried down Main Street and crossed the river. Then a short cut up the railroad brought them to the old rink where the meeting was being held, and as the two entered the door, a sight familiar and good to dwell upon met their eyes. Behind an improvised bar six or seven volunteers in shirt sleeves were drawing glasses of the amber liquid from the keg, and handing it across the counter to Freshmen who were bearing their laden trays among the three hundred or more students assembled. In front on one side sat the members of the squad, and on the other some of the men who had in other years sustained the honor of the Brown and White. The leader was preparing to address the crowd as the two entered.

"I am sorry to announce, fellows," he began, "that Gilbertson, whom we had so confidently relied upon to be with us this evening, has failed to come to time. Until this afternoon he fully expected to be—" and then catching a glimpse of the smiling face of the coach in the back part of the room, he finished abruptly. "But here he comes at the eleventh hour. Gilbertson, come up here and give an account of yourself.

Amid the cheers of the students, the coach walked down the aisle. Ashley followed him a little way, and then seeing a vacant chair, quietly slipped into it. He attracted no attention. The boy next to him looked at him curiously, and for a moment wondered who this gaunt, hollow-eyed, freakish-looking fellow was; but the next instant his eyes were riveted upon the alert coach who stood facing the crowd and waiting for silence.

The speech was short and to the point. It was a characteristic Lehigh speech, and reached the hearts of his auditors. He spoke of the honor of Lehigh, and of the feeling that has always existed between the rival colleges. He told them that the team had been working for three months with the sole object in view of winning this game. There was only one game that counted, he said. A team might win every other game on the schedule, and if they lost that one the season would be a failure; but on the other hand, if that game were won, no others need be taken into account. This year the team was not going to be a failure. They were in fit shape to win; they were going in with the spirit to win; and they were going to win. He paused, and the crowd, thinking he had finished, made the old building ring. Raising his hand for silence, Gilbertson continued: "Your leader," he said, as soon as he could make himself heard, "asked me to give an account of myself, and I'm going to do it. I met an old friend tonight on my way over here, an old Lehigh man. You all know our record with Lafayette for the last four years. Every fall they have met us, and every fall we have been defeated. But five years ago we had a team, even as this year we have a team. They won a game, even as this year we are going to win a game. And the man I met to-night is the man who captained that team, who won the game, and who was the greatest fullback Lehigh has ever had. I know you want to hear from Frank Ashley."

At the mention of Ashley's name, several of the alumni had jumped to their feet and were looking over the crowd. One of them caught sight of his face; and in a second was leading a cheer for the former captain which was heard for blocks away,—for Lehigh cherishes the names of her heroes, and the feats of Ashley were still talked of whenever football was in order.

Surprise for a moment kept the stranger dumb. He had been so wrapped up in Gilbertson's speech that he had once again imagined himself an undergrad. When the crowd had cheered, he had cheered with them and the sudden call brought him to himself with a jolt. He rose slowly from his chair and shambled awkwardly to the front bewildered and uncertain what to say. When he met the excited, ardent faces before him, his voice failed him for a moment. He began slowly and with hesitation, but soon warmed to his subject; and then, as a fire that has been almost smothered finally breaks through the crust that has restrained it, and blazes forth with renewed heat and energy, so his love for Lehigh, that spirit of loyalty and enthusiasm, came back to him and the words came fast and clear.

"Friends, old and new," he began, looking around him; "this call is wholly unexpected. It was merely a lucky chance, my striking town here tonight; it was luckier, my meeting Gilbertson, and luckiest of all is this chance to be with you. I have come from a god-forsaken country that never heard of Lehigh; I was tired; and I thought I would come back home to rest. I knew nothing of the game that is to be played. I did not expect to meet any of my old friends here; I thought they had all gone long ago. And now I find a host of friends of whom I had never heard. And in this way the meeting has done me a world of good—it has shown me that wherever Lehigh men may meet each finds a brother.

"Men of Lehigh," he cried, turning to the group of players at his left, "do you realize what this means? It means that there are people thinking of you now whom you have never seen. Hundreds from all over the country have been watching your work since the first game of the season. They have been looking forward to this game with as much interest as anyone in this crowd. And they will join you in exultation, or share with you the sorrow of defeat with the same spirit of steadfastness and loyalty that they have shown in years gone by. You have not, then, to work only to win this game; you have to fight for the honor and traditions of Lehigh, so that these men may have no cause for shame. Great things are expected of you. Will you disappoint the hopes of Lehigh men? Or will this time Thursday night see another victory won for the Brown and the White?"

His voice, which had become impassioned in this last appeal, sank again as he continued: "I am not much of a speech-maker. I made few speeches while in college, and have never made any since. But I well remember the last one I made. It was the night of my last day at Lehigh. A few of us were over at Carl's—Gilbertson, and Sparks, and Crow, (he glanced at the row of alumni) and several others were there. We had been talking football and singing Lehigh songs, and the combination seemed to create in the party a certain sentiment. I was called upon for a speech, and my last words were an expression of that sentiment. I would not attempt to defend it upon any reasonable ground," and here his voice rose until it rang through the building. "I only know that it has been in me since my early Freshman days. It is in the heart of every Lehigh man. I cherished it in college, and since then I have always held it dear. I have been told that in the delirium of fever I shouted it aloud in the wilds of Venezuela. And tonight the spirit is strong again within me. It is in the air of this meeting. I can see it longing to break forth from every one of the faces about me." For a moment he paused as a picture came to him of that other time, a picture in which were mingled the faces of his classmates, the table, and the steins; and then, with his hand in air, with the whole force of his being, he cried: "Long live Lehigh! — — — Lafayette !!"

* * * * *

As he crossed the bridge that night with Gilbertson, the light from the steel mills was red and brilliant. Flames of fire painted the sky in gorgeous hues. To Ashley it seemed that the whole world was brighter. The two friends stopped a moment to gaze. Ahead of them a crowd of students were shouting in hilarious chorus the information that "Everybody takes his hat off to Lehigh." Gradually the sounds of their voices passed out of hearing. And then, from somewhere back near the rink came the strains that are dear to the heart of every Lehigh man:

We will ever live to love her, live to praise her name:
Live to make our lives add luster to her glorious fame.
Let the glad notes wake the echoes! joyously we cry,
Hail to Thee, our Alma Mater! Hail! all hail, Lehigh!

Silently and reverently the two men removed their hats, and stood together, listening, in the rain.

Oh see the Lathe! The Lathe is in the Shop. We think it must be run by hot air. Who furnishes the hot air? You must not ask such questions, Willie, or the Instructor will become embarrassed. Selah! Run now and make a sketch of a dinner bucket and show the Feed. You, Freddie, will make a sketch of this Boring mill with a toe-dog-gonit. Show how the Work was held. Also calculate the cutting Speed. Make a section through the counter-weight and show the arrangement of the Molecules. Make a sketch of this open side planer and SHOW HOW THE WORK WAS HELD. You are tired, my children? Well, then let us rest here on this huge casting and watch the Worm turn. Perhaps after long hours of searching the Instructor may find us and take us home. Come now, let us make one more dear little sketch and show how the Work was held. Oh, see the lovely Easter Eggs! No dearie, they are not easter eggs, they are Elliptical Gears. Let us draw a Moral from these Gears.

Moral:—He who hesitates (at Charley's) is lost.

“I’m in love,” sighed the Fiend, and his eye held a tear,
Though his mouth showed a mischievous smirk.
Then he chortled and hastened his meaning to clear,
And explained, I’m in love,—with my work.

The Sub-Tackle Dozes

"Mr. Landerbutter," said Pop Meaker, "how do you differentiate the inverse sine of an angle?"

"WHAT! You don't know? I swear, you are the dumbest man I ever knew—except four! I don't see how you ever learned to play football! I can't teach you anything! No, you needn't try to explain! Here it is, two days before the quiz and you say you don't know. Here I've been wasting my time on you and neglecting the rest of the class and now you don't know. You don't REMEMBER what the sine of an angle is?"

"!!!—!—? ?—!——!!!! I mean that."

"You give me more trouble than all the rest of the class put together. All this year I've been doing my damn'd'st to try to teach you some mathematics and you don't know ANYTHING! And when I tell you about it you laugh like a Cheshire cat! What in the name of all that's fat and brown can I do with a man like that?"

"Now you go home tonight and study that book; from now on you must talk math, eat math, sleep math, think nothing but math, till that quiz, and if you don't know ANYTHING then, may the Lord have mercy on your soul, for I WON'T!" * * * * *

And then I woke up.

BOB WHITE.

In Nativity's tower he merrily jangled,

"Ring the sweet Bells of Heaven" was the tune that he mangled.

'Twas a student who said with a look most distressed,

"Wish to Heaven he'd do it and give us a rest."

G A G S

*Kind friends, no hurt
Is here intent,
But only fun
And merriment,
So if the laugh
Should bear a sting,
Please let this thought
To mem'ry cling:
That he who weeps
Must lonely be,
So laugh and join
Our company.*

MR. CRAWFORD—"Mr. Grimball, give me the dimensions of the poundal, as I just explained it."

GRIMBALL, '06—"The poundal is a body weighing one pound, one foot long, and having a velocity of one second per second!"

A. P. SMITH, '05—(to the dramatic coach, after the Mustard and Cheese show)—"I do not recognize your face, but your breath is deucedly familiar."

MR. CHEW—"Mr. Ryder, what kind of a line does that equator represent?"

RYDER—"A straight line."

MR. CHEW—"What kind of a straight line?"

RICH, '05—"I don't see how Mr. Thayer's going to do that problem. I couldn't get it myself?"

DEAN, '06—(heading cheering on Founder's Day)—"Come on fellows, give 'em the rickety rix before they can get up."

PROF. THAYER (walking into the lecture room as Hodgkins throws Martin over four rows of seats).

"Time out, gentlemen, time out!"

MR. LANDIS (in blowpiping)—"Did any one get a bead test for this specimen?"

WELKER—"I did."

MR. LANDIS—"There was nothing to test for but carbon dioxide."

KLEIN (at the Starvation Club)—"What kind of a bird is this?"

NED SNYDER, '05 (wrestling a wing)—"An eagle."

MR. THAYER (trying to explain)—"Why Mr. Kautz, if you don't see that, you don't know your lesson."

KAUTZ, '05—"Oh, yes, I see it all right."

MR. RICE—"Is 11-9 the correct score of the Penn game?"

ZAHNIZER, '05—"Yes, sir, to four decimal places!"

PHELPPS, '05—"Yes, and when I fell I grabbed Browning and ——"

HAYES, '05—"That's what I call grasping at a straw."

MR. THAYER—"Now let us take this case. It would never occur in practice, but it is a practical case."

SCHWARZE, '05—"Oh, he was a fine, big, well-built fellow—taller than I am."

PROF. FRANKLIN—"That electroscope is on the bum. The only way we can repair it is to get a new one."

PROF. LAMBERT (in analytics)—"Mr. Hess, go over and help Mr. Ford out. (Aside) Sending "Sammy" will reduce the swelling."

RYAN, '05—"Dub, I feel discouraged this morning, do I look it?"

DUB PAYNE, '05—"Yes, and if I looked like that I'd feel discouraged, too."

POWELL, '06—"He was killed."

PROF. GOODWIN—"Give me the active."

POWELL—"He died."

MR. STIDMAN (at Y. M. C. A. reception)—"Do you boys want to hear some funny jokes?"

VOICE—"Yes, sir, do you know anybody who can tell us some?"

MR. LOEWENSTEIN (to Cunningham, '04, designing a cross head)—"Mr. Cunningham, what is that cross head going to cost?"

"CUTE"—"$35.40."

MR. LOEWENSTEIN—"What's the 40c for?"

"CUTE"—"That's charged for the information."

TOPPING, '06 (in Chem. Philosophy)—"A compound is the parts you can break an element into."

KRAUSE, '04 (in blowpiping)—"This specimen has a strong saline odor."

PROF. THAYER—"Political economy was a gloomy science that rose, flourished and decayed in the early part of the 19th century."

MR. LUCIEN SULLIVAN (explaining a drawing plate)—"Um-m-m. Eh-eh———ah-ah———eh!!!"

ROOT, '06 (to Crawford, '06) in the Phys. lab. supply room)—"Say, Bunny, please hand me one of those borrowing slips."

CRAWFORD, '06—"Pray do not interrupt me —— I am at present conducting private research."

MR. CHEW—"Now suppose "n" equals any even number, such as 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 6, etc.?"

To Mr. Lucien N. Sullivan, B. S.

Naughty Lucy, stop coquetting!
 Don't you see the laugh you're getting?
 Parasols are quite old-fashioned,
 Smoke, chew, swear, and get a Dachshund!

WHEATLEY, '06—(to Mr. Gauss)—“I'm sure I don't know whether I'm to recite to Stiddy or Dutchy Ringer.”

HENDRICKS, '05 (explaining calculus)—“You see, Hodgkins, ϕ is very small.”

HODGKINS, '05—“Not chemical lab.”

MR. PALMER (in Jr. French)—“Mr. Mease, what are the catacombs?”

MEASE, '05 (dreamily)—“The catacombs? (Then sagely) Why the catacombs are a lot of busni off the Irish coast. The derivation of the word is from ‘Catté,’ meaning a series, and ‘Combin,’ meaning a comb. A series of combs or peaks!”

BROWNING, '05—“I guess Hayes has forgotten more than Mawhinney ever knew.”

HAYES, '05—“Goodness! You must think I have a fine memory!”

WELKER, '04—“Why Dr. Schober even flunked me among the rest.”

BARLEY, '05 (at Starvation Club)—“I don't see why this anvil chorus don't knock more on Turk's mouth.”

KIRK, '05—“They're afraid of loosing the hammer.”

New Lehigh yell:

Ray! Saffold!

Ray! Kautz!

Ray! Wunderly!!

Ray! Herrick!!!

(Cut those rays short, fellows).

CORT, '06—(seeing cross hairs in telescope)—“Say Charlie, give me another instrument. This one's cracked.”

CHARLIE—“I'm afraid the fault's with you.”

MR. BRIDGES: Packer—“Mr. Schneider, my problem is wrong. I used the wrong formula for work.”

MR. SCHNEIDER—“Packer, it's about time you knew the formula for work.”

MR. SCHOBER (to Payne, '05), reciting in Organic Chemistry)—“This is no place to crack funny jokes.”

GILMORE, '06 (translating Latin)—“He had a fiery steed.”

VAN DUYNE, '06 (helping to translate)—“He didn't have any advantage over us.”

MR. STIDMAN—“Mr. Stanford, was that the correct pronunciation of that word?”

STANFORD—“Like hell!”

MR. STIDMAN—“Yes, Laquelle! Correct!”

BOROWSKI, '04—“Why, I thought you meant ——”

MR. SULLIVAN—“I didn't mean anything, I meant just what I said.”

PROF. LAMBERT (in Calculus)—“Mr. Lesser, infinity is a quantity, any part of which is greater than the whole. There are some things we should not think too much about.”

DR. SCHOBER—“Mr. Haslam, what is the formula for benzine?”

HASLAM, '05—“ B_6H_6 .”

PROF. FRANKLIN—“Mr. Hutchinson, is Mr. Tally around?”

HUTCHINSON, '04—“No, sir, he's sick.”

PROF.—“Well, I left a poem here for the class book, did he get it?”

HUTCH—“Yes, sir, I just said he was sick.”

PROF. STEWART—"Such things will occur to you and to me—to the small and the great."

DR. ULLMAN—"Mr. Henry, your notes are very brief."

SI HENRY, '05—"I try to get down everything important. You don't want us to write up all the hot air, do you?"

LEE, '06—"You wouldn't think, to look at me, that I am the Chesterfield of New Brunswick."

MORSS, '04 (after Politics Quiz)—"Say Morgan, did you know those seven sources of international law?"

MORGAN, '04—"I knew six."

MORSS, '04—"Which one didn't you know?"

HAYES, '05—"Did you notice that they always sing hymn 1142 at the oratorical contests?"

SHAFFER, '05—"No, what is it?"

HAYES—"Oh, God, our help in ages past!"

PROF. STEWART (to Angle, '05)—"Do you pronounce your name Angle or Angel?"

TED—"Angle—but I have hopes."

DR. BARRELL (at TBII Banquet)—"The difference between a poker game and a recitation is that in one you bluff first and then are called, and in the other you are called first and then you bluff."

MR. THAYER (explaining a punching machine)—"You see, the machine will stop and come back suddenly."

"POP" KLINE—"Same way with a punching bag."

HENDRICKS, '05 (during the flood)—"I wish the faculty would have a meeting across the river and the bridge would wash away."

BRUSH, '05—"I wish they'd hold that meeting on the bridge."

MR. THAYER (during recitation)—“Mr. Johnson, will you please stop talking to Mr. Packer?”

DON—“This is private conversation, Mr. Thayer. Don't you know you're butting in?”

PROF. IRVING—“Mr. Hendricks, what are the two walls of a fault called?”

HENDRICKS, '05—“Foot wall and hang over.”

PROF. LAMBERT (in Anal. Mech.)—“We can't work these problems by the principles given in this subject. They involve the principles of “Least Work.” I believe you get that in the Civil Department.”

SHIVE, '04 (at the table)—“Do you talk French, Snyder?”

SNYDER—“Yes, a little.”

SHIVE—“Apres vous mit da potatoes!”

BRANDES, '04—“I'm not the kind of fellow to be bull-dozed.”

MR. HYDE—“Mr. Jones, what can you say about the evolution of the bridge truss?”

“Doc.” JONES—“I never studied Darwin very carefully.”

SCHMIDT, '05—“Mr. Ogburn, what is the temperature of the sun?”

MR. OGBURN—“About 4,000 degrees.”

SHEMA, '05—“Is it inhabited?”

STUDENT (at time of Bach festival)—“Dr. Thayer, is Bach composing now?”

DR. THAYER—“No, he's decomposing now.”

MR. STIDMAN (to tardy student)—“How is it you always come absent?”

Overheard during an instant's cessation of the M. E. Babble Machine:

“I babble, babble all day long
Through sunshine and foul weather,
But John Dent babbles twice as much
And says nought all together.”

A. FARABAUGH (looking at petitions referred by faculty)—“Well, look at that turn-down. I never before had a petition refused.”

ASHBAUGH—“You had better jot that down on your list of college honors.”

MR. STARKEY—“This circle is so small that it is almost impossible to adjust the compasses accurately unless you draw the circle free hand.”

MR. CHEW (killing time in Hydraulics)—“Mr. Wiley! How do you find the difference between the two pressure heads?”

WILEY (disgustedly)—“Subtract them.”

“RUBE” TOPPING (after English quiz)—“What did that man ‘Chowzer’ write, anyway?”

STREET (interposing between irate landlady and window breaking urchin)—“He ain’t dun nothing’ lady.”

“Oh, come with old Khayyam and leave the Wise
To talk. —”

SAFFOLD—“I never did like Kipling.”

MR. STIDMAN’s favorite sentence for French translation—“The boy has a mother and some chairs, but the girls have very beautiful, fine, new, old, white dresses.”

PROF. FRANKLIN (whose experiment won’t work)—“The earth is rotating in the wrong direction this morning.”

MR. HYDE—“Mr. Baily, you’ll have to get to class earlier.”

BAILY—“Oh, Mr. Hyde, I was up at the observatory last night till 9.30. When I stay up late I can’t get up early.”

MR. CHURCH (in Junior ship calculations) calling attention to a peculiarity of the stability curve)—“Mr. Burchstead, when the curve starts up steep, what is that a sign of.”

BURCHSTEAD—“Bluffing.”

MR. CHEW—“The radius of a circle is $II R^2$? Am I right, class? Catch? Catch?”

SOTTO VOICE (from back row)—“Catch hell!”

JONES, '05 (translating French)—“Once alone, I began to walk in front of myself.”

JUNIOR (in Strength of Materials quiz)—“Mr. Thayer, may I use 3 instead of 3.1416 for Π in this calculation?”

MR. THAYER—“Sh! Somebody might not know what it is!” (Help!)

PROF. STEWART (in Economics Exam.)—“Mr. Chase, does sitting close to that register annoy you?”

CHASE, '05—“No, sir, we are all used to hot air!”

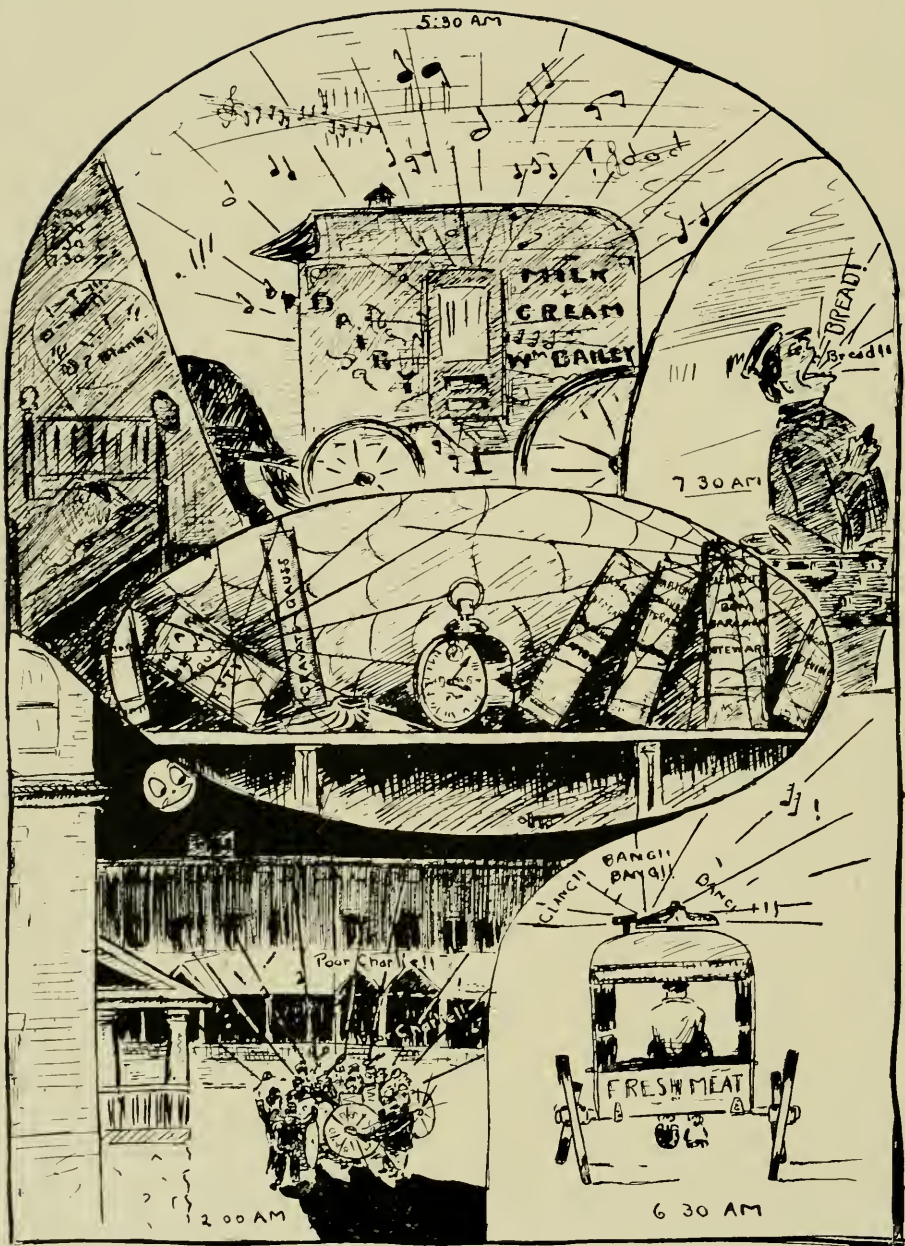

COL. LITTLE (at Junior Banquet)—“I cannot make a speech; only those who are lit may speak and I'm not lit.”

A. P. SMITH—“No! You blew out long ago!”

PROF. FRANKLIN (in Soph Electricity, after 30 minutes' frantic explanation of side push—“Are there any questions?”

DUB PAYNE, '05—“How old is Ann?”

THOUGH it seems but a span to the days of old
When we gathered in Packer Hall,
You'd have me, Horatio, now unfold
The tale of our lives, and the love we hold
To the mother and giver of all.

Is it lightest of tasks, in the noonday heat
To recall the cool of the morn?
Is it easy now, near the trodden beat
To mop the brow in the shaded seat,
And recall the times that are worn?

These aside, and the Mother herself appears
Like the dawn upon the sky,
Gleaming in colors of varied years,
And as young and as kind, for all the tears
She has shed, as she was for aye.

She is not, oh my friend, what at first she seemed
As we boys looked on her walls:
For the Autumn sun had never beamed
On a sterner face, so we youngsters dreamed,
As we entered her noble halls.

But the sternness was only Wisdom's note
As it sounds through every life:
"Let your heart be true, let your life devote
Of its best for the world; then Charon's boat
Shall be welcome after strife."

"And my love you shall see, as the days go by
You shall know that I pray for all;
That my sternest glance is a loving sigh,
That my brightest smile, as it turns on high,
Breaks forth at my children's call."

And this was her voice in days of old
And this is her voice today.
Horatio, strengthen your heart, be bold,
The love of the mother will never grow cold,
Her hand will open your way.

What's the Use ?

What's use of all this fuss and worry
Hither come and thither scurry
Like shadows of the night that run
Chased before the rising sun.

Up the hill they go a pikin',
One last look before recitin',
Sweat a runnin' out of every pore,
Might think it was a bear they're walkin' for.

All day long they're goin' past,
Puttin' ground behind so fast,
You'd think it was a walkin' race
Unless you knew their usual pace.

Us girls that like to loaf and sit,
And stop, and smoke, and talk a bit,
We got to stand for this darned pest
With nary a puff, nor chat, nor rest.

Maybe some day they'll change their ways
And find there's something else that pays,
In these four years of college life,
Besides this everlastin' strife.

'T would make this life well nigh sublime
To stop this worry and take your time.
It seems to me it's far too good
To ever come true — but Lord!, wish it would.

History

THE professor who occupies the chair of political economy, international law, anthropology, history, comparative anatomy, agricultural chemistry, ethnology and sociology, hung up his hat, arranged his trouser knees and occupied his chair.

"Professor," ventured a daring spirit, "what is the subject of this course? I observe that it is put down in the register as History."

"Well, I don't see what difference it makes what I call it. A rose under another name would smell just as sweet, wouldn't it, Mr. Johns? I mean Mr. Powell. It is terrible for you two men to have such names. I can never tell which is John and which is Johnnie. What church do you belong to, Mr. Gilmore? The Evangelical you say? Like the Methodist church is it? Do they practice St. James' religion in your church? What! You don't know what St. James' religion is? Why, I thought you were a Mandarin of the Scriptures. Are you a Mandarin, Mr. Gilmore?"

"I guess not."

"What is a Maudarin?"

"I don't know."

"Then how do you know whether you are a Mandarin or not? You will never cross the Rubicon with such reasoning as that. What I want you to learn to do is to think. A truly scientific mind takes nothing for granted. If a man is really cultured,—what does the Latin word mean that culture comes from, Mr. Hodgkin?"

"Why, I dare say—"

"Mr. Van Duyne."

"It means about the same as civilization, I guess."

"Mr. Van Duyne, why do you put your fist in your mouth when you answer me? Do you think that the vestibule is too large for the orifice? Suppose that some little child up there in Bucks County were threatened with diphtheria, and the doctor takes what he calls a culture, would you say that the child was cultured? Mr. Hodgkin is beginning to look worried. Unless we tell him how old the world is and what is going to become of Virginia, he won't think life is much worth living, after all. Now, Mr. de Schweinitz, what is the purpose of all I have been telling you this morning?

"I have a good idea, but I don't exactly know how to say it."

"That is exactly what I want to teach you; to think logically and to express what you think clearly. I want you to be pragmatic in mind. What does pragmatic mean in Greek? Oh, you are immune, are you? Thucydides wrote pragmatically. Think of a Greek general who had lost a battle way off in ———, and was afraid to come home because he thought he would be executed. Suppose the captain of our baseball team were shot (like a British admiral was shot, on his own quarter deck) if his team did not win most of his games; think how many home runs would he make! Mr. Powell, who was the best second-baseman in the American League last season? Lajoie? I thought you knew better than that!" (and etc. to infinity).

* * * * *

"Before we come together next time I want you gentlemen to look up Chapters V, VI, and VII of Mills Principles of Logic, Huxley's essays on 'What is a Liberal Education?'; C. W. Reade's article in the Century about twenty years ago on the same subject, the thirty pages of the introduction to our text book, and above all be sure not to come without knowing what pragmatic means."

"That will do for this morning, gentlemen."

BOB WHITE.

When Mr. Gibson drew this girl,
With pensive face and question-curl,
He little knew the monstrous whirl
He'd stir up in my noddle.
The question, so it seems to me,
That causes most perplexity,
Is will the Fates most kindly be
And let me meet his model.

The Song of the Gunny Gang

Come all ye fellow students
And listen to our rhyme
Of Gears and Lathes and Boring Mills
All in the summer time.
No Effort Crowd, no "Ump Now Ya's"
Must round our presence hang;
We are the bold mechanicals,
We are the Gunny Gang.
We gunny Lucy Sullivan
Without a fear or dread.
We give a shout: we heave a rock;
It lands on some one's head.
We are the bold mechanicals
All in the summer school;
And Satan keeps a place for us
In regions not too cool.
And when we roast upon the coals,
Our bodies burned to bones,
We'll give the cry of "Gunny,"
And still keep throwing stones.
Each one will then a cinder take
And gently let it slip
At poor old Mr. Devil;
And from each and every lip
Will rise our noble battle song
Of "Don't give up the ship."

The Tale of Billum's Hall

*A Grand Symphony of the Ph. D's., M. D's. and D. T's.
Per Request of the Y. M. C. A.*

IN THREE SPASMS

SPASM I.

Scene: Hyperbole Hall—Buggology Dept. (Any old time when the spirit's weary and language flows free and easy.)

Enter Lobster Chorus—crawling—Penny in command.

PENNY—"Last night I dreamed a fearful dream,

E'en yet my nerves are quaking;

My knees are knocking pitty pat,

My head and hands are shaking.

I dreamed my murdered rabbitt, here,

All gory on his tray,

With lungs and liver minus,

Its stomach oped to-day,

Had yielded up a Darwin's tome

And masticated Hay.

Then as in horror I drew back

It grinned in fiendish glee;

"Like Darwin, Hume and Huxley

I eat Ontolgie."

(Footsteps in the passage. A hoarse whisper "Cheese it—the Doc.")

Enter the Doc.

LOBSTER CHORUS—"Hail, hail, the gang's all here

We might as well be minus.

You'll find the lesson in the book,

'Tis something 'bout the Dinas.

Please don't disturb our restful sleep

With questions or with quips,

But just get out that little book

And put us down for zips."

SPASM II.

THE DOC—"Now hark ye Seniors, Juniors, all,
Ye lads of every race,
And let no lobster work his claws
Whilst I spout off my face;
My hobbie is Buggologie,
As you can plainly see
By squinting at my bulging dome
So glistening and so free."

CHORUS—"O, holy smoke, he's off again,
With yarns and stories cheesy,
Our ears are tin, so now begin
And sting it at us easy."

THE DOC—"Many years ago when I was young and charming,
I lived out in the counterie

CHORUS (aside)—(His yarns are quite alarming)
I used to catch the polywog
And snare the frisky skate
With a rattler in each pocket
And other snakes for freight."

CHORUS (aside)—"If that is so we understand
About the "skate" he knows
We've heard of snaky dreams before
Down where the Widman's flows.")

Doc (continuing)—"At last I grew to be a man
As you, my boys, shall do
When you can classify the birds
Alive—and fossils, too.
I knew the fishy tribes by heart,
Each shin-bone I could fix,
Of Dinosaurs and Hellebores
And Archeopteryx.
As birds of feather flock together

And pole attracteth to pole—
Professors Me—and other experts
Camped out around Wood's Hole.
Starfish, suckers, lobsters, crabs,
We kept 'em in a tank
And other bugs in alcohol
Paraded rank on rank."

CHORUS (aside)—"Methinks a pleasing sight like this,
At Lehigh he'll see yet
Some time when the ball is over
With poor old Lafayette,
When other bugs in alcohol
Shall gather 'round the tank,
And suckers, lobsters one and all
Shall pe-rade rank on rank.")

DOC. (concluding)—"Now little boys before we part,
The lesson I'll assign
Is chapter 'leven to 'leventy 'leven,
And schedule ninty-nine.
Read Hume and Huxley thoroughly,
And Darwin very fair,
So you can discuss species,
And Evolution air."

SPASM III.

CHORUS—And this is why you understand
We love this course to beat the band;
Our little lessons—truly—truly,
Our Professor—duly—duly.
Very sorry to say good-bye,
Tears of sorrow in each eye."

EXIT WITH ALACRITY.

De Knyghts

Ye Olden Knyghts in nights of olde
 Would gyrd him up in armour plate
 And ryde out in the dusk full bolde
 To smyte some bandit on the payte,
 Some Robber Baron on the chinne.
 He'd swat and rescue Ladye Faire,
 And he could cusse—Ods Bodikin—
 He surely was a waye out theyre.

Ye Moderne Knyght in canvasse geare
 Ye Faire Maide's smyle has o't i wonne
 By chewyng offe ye half backe's ear.
 Ye olde Knyght is a mile i skunne.
 But when it comes to cussin'—WHEWE!
 Ye Modern Knyght hath world renowne.
 Gadszooks? Grammerey? Rotten! You
 Go waye backe Olde Knyght and sitte downe!

Another One

THERE lived once Two Brothers, born of a Rich but Honest family. These interesting Youths came into the world upon the Same Day, and the difference between their ages was less than any Assignable Quantity, which is technical for twins. Their Pa was of Hebrew extraction, and their mother wore the tartan of the Clan MacSqueeze before she became of the Mothers in Israel. The sons inherited most of these Virtues, and a Few More.

When they became of sufficient age, they were sent to College, of course, for Colleges were no more Particular in those days than they are now, and it was about this time that they developed the Traits that have made this ode a possibility. Isaac, always somewhat of a Tight Wad, became so penurious that even the Dutch bowed down in his presence; but Duncan blew in all of his Liberal Allowance the day he cashed the check, and borrowed on All Sides. He would bet on everything in sight, from a football game with the Allentown Kindergarten to the vagaries of the Absence System. He had a Thirst, also, which if controllable, he made no efforts at all to control, to the great joy and profit of the Public Comfort Stations. He was also in Love, and on the theory of safety in numbers he spread his Affections over a Wide and Comely group, from Freemansburg bis zum Slatington. Between times, he invested in the Turf and played Craps in barber shops, and at the end of his Fourth Year he was summarily ejected by an explosion of offended sensibilities and a Breach-of-Promise Attorney. Isaac got through in the regular way about the same time, and they returned to the Happy Home on Third Avenue.

Isaac having taken in the Course in Business Management, went in with the Old Man, and made things Hum. He had the Three Balls regilded, and put up the Rate about 300 per cent. He learned how to evade the Tenement House Law, and became such an authority on Graft that even Police Captains would sit at his feet while they got the Goods off—and into his Ready Hand. He did so well that he was able in ten years to retire to Paris and have his doings chronicled by the Foreign Editor of the New York Herald, and the District Attorney would drop his cigarette at the mere mention of his name. Duncan no sooner crossed the Parental Threshold than the old man got a parental thrash hold, and the last they saw of him he was disappearing down 14th Street, with a Capital of seven cents in cash and a wallet of uncut stones that had been dropped in the scramble. After hiding for some weeks in the Wilds of Jersey City, he emigrated to Brooklyn, and went into business on Myrtle Avenue. Here he did well, and his customers in the bargain, so that he was shortly obliged to conduct a hasty but dignified Retreat across the river once more, where Wall Street swallowed him up. His investments hit the Mark, and the mark, being the Public, had to Pay Up. His Bank Account waxed mighty, and diamonds blossomed all over his Pink Shirt. Miss Lillian Nichtvergessen, her lawyer and her papa dropped upon him one day in his palatial office, and there was a quiet but elegant wedding in the Dutch Reformed Church the next morning; and the same hour that beheld Isaac, with a fat Havana in his mouth, watching Sandy Hook Lightship fade away astern, beheld also Duncan, with Mrs. Duncan and the others, speeding away southward for Palm Beach, in a special car attached to the Corporation-State Express. Therefore, it is equally true that

Many a Mickle Makes a Muckle, and Nothing Venture, Nothing Have.

Blow Piping

You put up 15 juicy plunks
And get a blow-pipe set,
You will be one who never flunks,
You'll blow 'em right—you bet!
It sure will be a bloomin' sin
The way you'll spot the Zn. and Sn.,
And rope the subtle As. in.

You get a pesky specimen
(Here's where your trials begin),
And test with Co. No. 3 then
To get that Zn. or Sn;
The grass green color that you get
('Tis one that you remember yet),
Is sure to be a violet
Or some tint that you've never met.

And then you go through all the stuff,
(It is'nt any bean)
To get a blue you snort and puff
And get a huntsman's green.
You make 5,000 tests all right,
Try every method in your sight,
Then flat upon your neck alight
When you report pyrargarite,
And find that it is adamite.

You make the flame and charcoal test,
And carbonate reduction,
You hunt for shifty acids lest
A miss should cause a ruction.
You make a bellows of your head,
And blow and gasp till nearly dead,
And get a sky-blue pink for red!
In order to stay sane instead
Of going plumb bug-house,'tis said,
The Books of Job must oft be read.

(P. S.—Your term mark is a “Zed.”)

Der Cop Alretty

Now hark ye, merry gentlemen,
 Unto the toast I give.
 'Tis to the cops of Bethlehem
 We'll drink an early death to them
 As long as we may live.

Oh, would that every dumheit cop
 Were buried 'neath the ground,
 So we might on the corner stop
 And yell and whoop until we drop,
 With not a one around.

Why should they keep us on the go,
 And always on the run,
 When we are out, I'd like to know,
 To take a drink or see a show,
 Or have a little fun?

So drink your toasts to lives of ease
 And love and all the rest of 'em,
 But drink, my friends, as well as these,
 Bad luck to that colossal cheese
 Der Esel Cop of Bethlehem.

Practical Hints for Mechanical Engineers

BY PROF. WM. CHESTY, E. E.

I. It is considered bad practice to stop the engine driving a dynamo by seizing hold of the fly-wheel.

II. Do not grasp the two terminals of a blazing arc light with the unprotected hands; neither place the nose twixt the carbon terminals, as the arc has a light but shocking odor.

III. In making efficiency tests, if it is necessary to take indicator cards, be careful not to handle an indicator of temperature greater than 4273.5C; but in no case drop the instrument once grasped.

IV. Wires leading from an ammeter on a table must pass through a hole in the table, (generally about 50 mm.) Exercise great care in order not to stumble against the wire and pull the ammeter through the hole.

V. Remember that this work is of vital importance to mechanical engineers.

VI. In house-wiring the conduits should not be led through rat or mouse holes, as the currents are detrimental to the gastronomic capabilities of aforesaid rodents. (Read Vol. III, pp. 287-129426, Jour. of Proceedings S. P. C. A.)

VII. Bear in mind that "familiarity breeds contempt;" do not under any circumstances become familiar with your work.

The Angler's Dream

I sat in my study one autumn night,
The rain fell hard outside;
And the drifting smoke of my ancient clay
Seemed to cover the darkened walls so gray,
Like rocks in the rising tide.
And all that I saw on the shadowed wall
Was the dusty rod and creel;
And the sound of the pattering rain gave place
To the song of the running reel.

Amid the fragrant clouds arose
A vision before my sight;
I saw the Delaware's sparkling breast,
The waves with glittering, sunlit crest
Aglow in the morning light.
By the nearer shore lay the "Eddy,"
Like steel in the silver flood;
And the rush of the fish o'er the dull, brown reef
Was a sight to stir the blood.

Upon a point of rock above,
Stood a figure clad in brown;
With neckerchief blue afloat in the breeze,
And the smoke of a black briar, puffed at ease,
Came merrily drifting down.
A comrade he that angler's love,
When by the stream they stray;
Whose jolly tale, and hamper full,
Beguile the holiday.

But luncheon stories are out of mind
In the early morning blush;
For now's the time to watch the line
With foot well braced on the sharp incline,
Awaiting the coming rush.
For the angler true on a summer day
Ne'er wastes the early hour;
For fish bite best when the wind is west
And the dew is on the flower.

A ripple runs around the line,
 A tug takes up the slack;
 A moment more, and the smooth line slides
 Through a glistening row of whistling guides
 And the reel-gear buzzes back.
 Hurrah for the rapid straining rush
 As the line tears up the spray;
 Give line to the fighting small-mouthed bass
 That cheers the opening day.

And now he's slowly coming in
 To the drone of the chattering reel,
 The water flies from the broad tail fin;
 On the next down run we'll line him in;
 One toss, he's in the creel.
 But the swift bright water fades away;
 The rain beats down once more,
 The smoke thins out, the pipe is cold,
 And the angler's dream is o'er.

The "Ascent" of Man

A Prehistoric Comedy in One Jump

"Sad! Aye, truly, sorely sad," sighed Prehistoric Man as he dodged a falling cocoanut. "Ditto," sighed Mrs. P. Man—and the motion was unanimous.

Above them arched the world-long span of the sky, glowing with the pure, cloudless blue of infinite space; around them lay a lazy, sunlit world; before them sparkled the sea, ever changeful, forever sweeping in titanic rhythmic cadence toward the slanting beach; the soft sand shifted and yielded beneath them, sand filled with the warmth of perfect days.

P. Man pulled guardedly on his Stinko Perfecto, and wiggled his toes in the sand. Mrs. Man choked reproachfully and moved to windward. Suddenly Man rose up and declaimed vehemently, "Me for the cocoanut orchard, I've got it at last. No more shall I be pricked in conscience!" He then modestly but painfully stepped behind a palm tree, coming out in a moment with a look of relief and a blackberry branch. "Look at this," he said peevishly, "and yet that banana-nosed tailor told me distinctly that these trousers were 'all fig leaf and a yard wide.'" "Trust a Jew to bleed you," chortled Mrs. P. Man, trying in vain to unite the folds of her natty geranium petticoat which had proved unequal to her sense of humor. "When you went to him I told you you'd get stuck."

*Thus always has fair woman been
The comfort and sweet solace of mankind
From pre' e'en to historic time.*

Moral: Every "rise" has its thorn.

S.

At Sea

Drifts my frail craft to storm-fraught winds a slave,
O'er the broad, heaving bosom of the sea,
Where swift sea-swallows cry unceasingly
And billows boom in far off ocean cave.
Now sink I in the hollow of the wave
Despairing as the vast abyss yawns wide;
Yet still the wind-tossed surges safe I ride
And lightly rise crestward as from the grave.
Less loudly beats the throbbing pulse of fear
While hope, erstwhile asleep, lifts her fair hand
To draw me on. Sweetly on the ear
There falls the tone of distant bell. The land
Looms faint through mist and high-hurled foam
And each wave bears the wand'rer nearer home.

World-History

Three epochs in world's history
 Are mentioned by the sage,
 The first, (a flat, dull stretch) is called
 The water-drinking age.
 It lasted till the great Deluge,
 Which God on earth did send,
 When all the sinners here below
 In water found their end.

And next God made the golden wine
 ('Twas merrier then by far),
 But even when Anacreon sang
 Its virtue men would mar.
 For all mankind mixed with the wine
 Pure water, (only think!)
 Till someone cried: "'Tis better far
 That water we should drink."

Then spoke the Lord: "This way of life,
 My patience sore doth try,
 My second period, I see,
 Must also be put by.
 A new creation I'll bring forth
 To drink unmixed my wine,"
 He called, and on the earth appeared
 A student, gay and fine.

The good new time, the gay new time
 Through us it came to be;
 It makes the world from baneful care,
 From all dull sorrow free.
 And so unmixed and pure we drink
 Our wine, for 'Auld Lang Syne.
 God made for us the grape-juice sweet,
 But us He made for wine.

—From the German of Dr. W. Kleefeld.

Busted

Alone I am sitting and brooding,
O'er money most wastefully spent,
On Five Dollar Re-s, most amusing
For now I don't own a d——d cent.

My shirts are much torn at the elbows,
My collars and cuffs make me sigh,
But I fear I can never replace them,
While Five Dollar Re-s are so high.

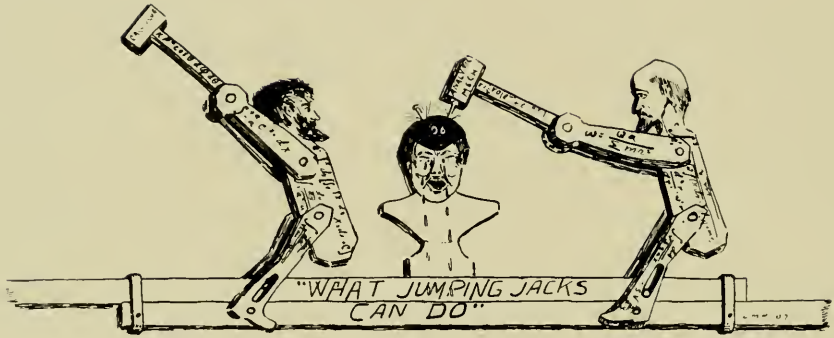

Junior Proms are now out of the question,
For the money has all passed away,
Farewell ye mint juleps and high-balls,
For at home, sweet, sweet home must I stay.

T. M. M., '06.

There was once an old Dutchman named Joe
Who, when blowing his horn, was a show,
He was in great demand
By the Bethlehem Band
For just look at the notes he could blow.

A Toast

Here's to the cops of Bethlehem,
 So let us wish 'em well.
 We'll drink an early death to them
 And wish 'em well in—(well?)

Willy ate some dynamite,
 No one ever saw him light,—
 Mother said—"Good Lord preserve us
 Noisy children make me nervous!"

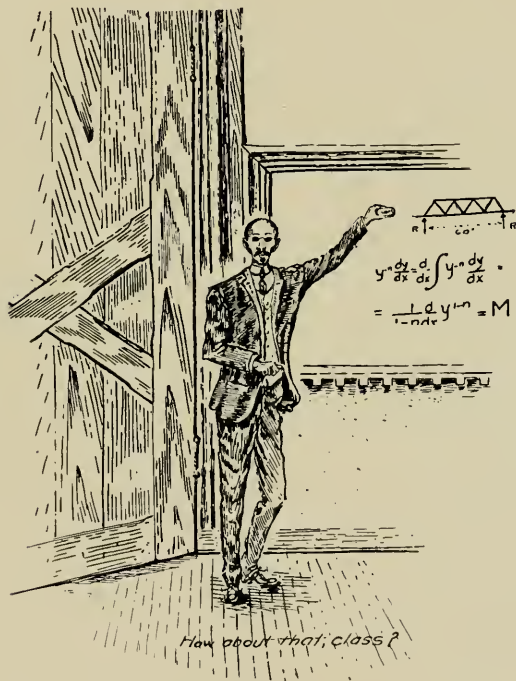

Mary boarded at the Eagle
 With her little brother Sam,
 And every Sunday night at supper
 Mary had a little lamb,—ham, beef, tongue and potato salad.

There was once an instructor named Thayer,
Saw the Midway at Allentown's Fayar,
And the things that he saw
Caused the droop in his jaw
And he still wears a horrified Stayer.

K.

Stop that awful effervescing,
"Lovely" Chew, you're only guessing.
From hot air you're addle-pated,
Soon we'll be asphyxiated.

My Alma Mater

When I'm an old Alumnus,
My babies on my knee,
I'll tell them how at old Lehigh
I once took a degree.
I'll paint a little picture
And in colors fair and bright,
I'll tell them of those golden days
In the halls of the Brown and White.

I'll tell them how an alien,
I've roamed for many years,
And how I miss those comrades
Whom I loved in joy and tears,
And with what hopes we parted
To battle in life's fray,
For all must carve their fortunes out
Or perish by the way.

I'll tell them of those weary nights
I burned the midnight oil,
And how the fleeting hours rolled by
As with what pain and toil
I gathered fact and theory
From out her plenteous store.
Ah, they are the days I dream about,
The days that will come no more.

Oh what an Alma Mater
Thou hast ever been to me,
And how I ever yearn to prove
My tender love to thee.
But as I totter on through fate,
Tho' my path be dark as night,
Thou shalt find in me a grateful son,
My dear old Brown and White.

The oldest school of its kind in America, with a century and a half of history and experience, yet furnished with all modern equipments, and pursuing the latest improved methods.

We do not especially prepare for college, but for LIFE. Our course of study is carefully planned to give a complete and solid education, and to make our graduates broadly cultured and truly refined women, fit to meet all the duties and demands of the best modern society and a useful active life.

Our thorough scholastic instruction is only half of our work. We give equal care and attention to the training of the characters of our pupils, the formation of right habits of thought, feeling and conduct, and the development of all those qualities, virtues and graces, that enter into a self-respecting, strong and true Christian womanhood.

First-Class Brands of Fuel

The comfort which professors and students enjoy in their homes and in their fraternity houses is enhanced by the use of our special stock of Pure Upper Lehigh Coal. Place orders for winter stock in June, before the college term closes, or early in fall, and secure a good bargain.

Our stock of building material, including reliable lumber and fine mill work, is always open to inspection. A visit to our yards will repay the student who is interested in the strength of materials.
